

Can lockers be placed next to beds

How far apart should a bedside locker be?

The spacing required between bedside lockers and a bed is determined by its function. If you're using your bedside table for items that you know you'll need to have at your fingertips, then closer is better. You should consider placing it further away from the bed if its primary purpose is for aesthetics only.

Do you need a bedside locker?

Whether your bedroom is the size of a shoebox or takes up an entire floor, bedside lockers are a must. After all, having a surface on either side of the bed means that many things can be grabbed at a moment's notice. A bedside table typically has three drawers, but some may come with less and have two or even one, but this depends on the design.

What is a bedside locker?

They are one of the most practical pieces of furniture you can have in your bedroom, and they provide an ease and comfort to your living space. A bedside locker will complement the overall organisation and design aesthetic of a room, and as they are placed alongside your bed, they provide an ideal prop for a reading lamp and other essential items.

Can a chest of drawers be used as a bedside locker?

Using a chest of drawers as a bedside locker in a larger bedroom can work too. Dressers create more surface space so you can include two bedside lamps and have more room for your belongings. The main difference between a console table and a dresser is, of course, the amount of storage space.

What if my locker is wedged between the wall and bed?

If your locker is wedged between the wall and bed, it could damage all of these items individually. In this case, you should try to find a narrow bedside table or just something a little smaller. What you use your bedside table for impacts the next two points, spacing and style.

Do bedside lockers add value?

Bedside lockers are far more than just a prop when it comes to the overall look and feel of your bedroom. They add value through their functionality and style, and, most importantly, they help to make your day-to-day living more comfortable. They provide a luxurious statement piece, and they complement a bedroom of any size.

4 &#0183; Next to the Bed. For those that do not have a nightstand or who only possess a single nightstand, putting the desk next to the bed is a good option for spacing. It will fill the wall nicely by falling a foot or so away from the bed, far ...
